Veterans Of Future Wars Hold Meeting

Bill Greene Calls Organization A "Jaw-Bone of Our Boys," Not Bad Foods

"If you think you’re going to get your $1,000 and interest from Congress you’re crazy," said Professor William Greene, at a meeting of the Veterans of Future Wars in Room 4-118 last night.

Professor Greene was addressing a group of veterans because he himself was a veteran.

The meeting, held to institute a future liberal military organization, was opened with a reading of the By-Laws by Richard C. Green, read by a toast by Post Commander George M. Lessing. Lessing defined the purpose of the organization as one which was solely interested in getting its bonus for the wars in which its members fought. He said that the veterans are getting in trouble because the veterans are getting too much money.

Greene stated the forthcoming plans for the organization, both here and throughout the country.

The meeting adjourned in good order. Professor Greene made a short speech in which he attempted to correct the two allegedly erroneous assertions.

Arthur H. Cook, '39
Wins Poster Contest

Arthur H. Cook, '39, was chosen the winner of the Open House Contest. He had written a poster which bears the title "Polytechnic Institute of New York." The poster depicts a picture of the Institute's main building and the words "Polytechnic Institute of New York." The poster is elegantly designed with a combination of black and white colors. Cook will receive a prize of $100 for his winning poster.

Spring Elections Set For All Classes To Elect Men
Twenty-Five Signatures Needed To Obtain Nomination

On April 15, the general spring elections for class officers will be held. All nominations are due on or before April 18 to 1 p.m., April 16, to the Information Office.

Twenty-five signatures are required for each candidate. Each individual must sign the nomination ballot for one candidate for any office.

An innovation will take effect for this election. Nominations will be printed by the Election Committee in the form of slips with the candidate's name and the office he wishes to run for.
