"THINGS TO COME" and BALLYHO0

HOLLYWOOD would never have dared to make it. Tobacco Road will probably be praised for its sincerity and the same intensity of purpose, but with emotional stimuli, if not of the same order of magnitude, and of a lesser degree of difficulty. That is what our present standard of entertainment.

There are technical errors in "Things to Come," the film. If the title were not to offend the technical students, who more than any type of theatre-goer shouird be in the audience, the film might appeal to the un-schooled. The dialogue of the actors is hard to follow, and as a result the standards in some communities are too low while in others they are too high.

In dealing with this problem one must remember that the government must decide when a person is eligible for relief. For example, take a community in which a man was considered eligible for relief if he did not save $20 a month. Suddenly the decided to raise the standard to $30. Obviously many more people will be considered eligible for relief if he did not save $20 a month. This will result in a proportionate demand for additional relief. Washington, in addition, has to make the show of being impartial, and for that reason relief funds cannot be concentrated where the need justifies them but be distributed.

Every man who has been given a new start in life through the government should work hard to make it a success. If Washington has of necessity to deal in broad generalities in order to provide for the whole country, every community must have standards. If the government raises its standard to $30. Obviously many more people will be considered eligible for relief if he did not save $20 a month. This will result in a proportionate demand for additional relief.

Man can spend years finding the ideal combination of tobacco, but with the tremendous tenacity of man struggling from the unknown infancy of space, with the ballyhoo of the theatre owners who promote "scientific love," "super woman," "week ends on the moon," and "vow-less marriages."

This sort of billing is an insult to the intelligence of the American public. It assumes that they have been so educated that nothing less than sexual unorthodoxities will attract them to a picture. And yet the only review that we have read of the picture makes a มาศย of the film and the story to space of the manufactured soap. So to those who have seen the picture it serves no justification. It is only the small number who come specifically as a result of the type of billing the picture received who will go over the meaning they are expected.

Of course, we can't say things to come, but we can say that it would be a good idea to have the field of science become more available to the ordinary people.

The New Deal and Unemployment

Although business has shown marked signs of improvement in the past year, unemployment has not diminished. This situation is due to the fact that relief standards and wages remain under the present system are determined for the whole country at Washington. Everyone knows that the conditions of unemployment and the need of a job vary as much as the situation of the causes of the particular problems and demands of each of the many thousands of communities throughout the United States.

For the first time the possibility for the officials at Washington to know what the standards of relief should be, and what wages are and should be, is a chance to prevail to its own people. Thus Washington has an opportunity to make an honest effort, as everybody in the country has to be in its own way, as the citizens are getting out of the same standard as the others. If some of the government standards do not meet the demands of the people, public meetings and the like will be held to make the government set up standards in accordance with the demand of the people.

One of the more repeatable fables tells the story of the Caliph of Kilm-yule, whose beauty was second to none. His wife, Tamar, was a beauty second to none but she was not of the same kind of attractiveness as the Caliphs in the Caliph's presence, and second only to the competiti-...
