LOPSIDED FRAGMENT
LO! THE POOR BROWN BAGGERS

The following statement is attributed to Dr. Karl T. Compton, writing to the magazine "Letters".

"As compared with pre-depression days, we find that employers are being extraordinarily selective in the selection of employees. They are steering clear of the sportsman, and particularly the new additions to our facilities. This is one of the few sports which, like tennis, is not considered a necessary habit for the truly cultivated young lady."

The story of good sportsmen and women, and the sort of work that employers are doing, is intended by a large group of the students and supporters of sailing and long live sailing at Technology."
