from the center of undergraduate activities.

Technology Union has chosen the subject of greatest student interest for discussion at its meeting on November 4. The question is: "A hangar that a student auditorium-theater be chosen as the project for expansion of recreational facilities rather than the gymnasium-widening project?"

Arthur M. York, Editor of The Tech, has promised a thorough investigation by the paper and will take a decision stand in a later issue. Relative costs as well as the greatest good for the students and the school will be considered before advancing any plan.

Expect Report Attendance

"Resolved: that student auditorium-theater be chosen as the project for expansion of recreational facilities rather than the gymnasium-widening project" is the official wording of the question for discussion which John J. Wallace, '38, chairman of the Union Steering Committee expects to attract good for the students and the school.

Need Theater, Says
Professor Greene

Claims Auditorium Would Have Benefited Tech Show Financially

"There is a definite need for an auditorium of some sort as present," declared Professor William C. Greene and "my personal opinion favors an auditorium (instead of a gymnasium) as an improvement in that direction," he added.

"Tech Show would have had an easier time financially if it could have worked in its theater instead of armory. "Professor Greene said, when asked whether the lack of a theater contributed to the failure of the show.

Professor Dean M. Fullor, when asked his opinion, said that 10 places out of 10 that didn't have either would probably build a gymnasion. However, "the greater need should be divided," he added. Professor Fullor is coach of Dramashop, one of the organizations which would benefit from a theater at Technology.

"A swimming pool is needed here," said Glen C. Doherty, '37, Captain of Swimming, "in my opinion the situation at time before this need is realized." Doherty expressed no preference for a combination of pool with either a gymnasium or theater. He suggested a possible combination of all three.

Wallace also announced, to accommodate the large number of students who may desire to attend the discussion, registration for the first term will be provided in the Marble Lobby on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week, the morning hours.

"Do you want an addition to Wallace for dances?" or a gym to "develop your physique?" ... You are not going to get either (a gym or swimming pool) if you don't show the administration you want it. ... You be sure that in a few years it (the gym) will be an accomplished fact." These were some of the feelings expressed by Professor Walter C. Voss in connection with the proposed and much discussed gymnasium or addition to Walker Memorial.

The other side of the question is expressed in a report in the May, 1939, issue of the Technology Review by a representative committee of undergraduate students and alumni. This report stated that one of the most important needs of the school was enlarged facilities in Walker Memorial, including "provision of a suitable auditorium for gatherings of Faculty, Alumni, and Student bodies ... enlargement of the present accommoda-
