Intercolliegates

The poor co-eds at German universities and colleges acquire their education by degrees and at the end of their course most of them can't get any diplomas anyway.

Only a limited number of women—enough to fill vacancies in specific professions—are given the chance to write exams for their degrees. So Gretchen can't finish law school and expect to search for a position. If she can't afford a job and with it the opportunity to pass the final test, she has to be content with saying: "Ich, I didn't want the darn old thing anyway." Ja, so geht's.

The whole Wofford College football team was moved to great lengths for an education. Imagine covering 11,800 miles just to go to school. From China? India? No, they only live about 80-odd miles from the campus, but they commute daily. One of the fellows figures that to burns approximately 58 gallons of gas during the school year, which he says isn't too much, maybe you'd better figure it out for yourself.

The Phi Kaps at Northwestern University have built an oversized doghouse for their Great Dane mascot.

"If education is to realize its true goal it cannot confine itself to an academic discussion of life—it must become a part of life itself. I believe education is making a great contribution to the solution of our difficulties. It is creating interest and stimulating discussion. Letting men every man have his say to the constitutional method of solving our problems. Why should we make teaching into a sure profession by making our teachers...tak...a special oath?" The Republicans! All M. L. Johnson hands a question to the D. A. R.
