The compulsory feature of the Re-serve Officer's Training Corp at Technology College was eliminated next September, the Tech farmed exclusively last night.

Dr. Morse, who is chairman of the technical committee, said that the policy was one of economy.

Many professors and students said that the move was a step in the right direction.

Some students, however, expressed concern about the impact on morale.

Dr. Morse expressed confidence that the new policy would be well-received.

"It is important that we maintain discipline, but it is equally important that we do not create unnecessary hardship," he said.

"We must find a way to balance the needs of the students with the needs of the institution."
