The majority considered the action ill-advised. Arthur McCabe, member of the freshman squad, who was looked upon as a leading prospect for next year, stated that the students should vote their opinion on the charge Olson "are paying for the maintenance of bottles." He suggested that a position be started by those who desire to see the sport restored. Henry Kandt, sophomore, 175 pounder said that, although "I don't agree with the rules," he had some good reasons behind the M. I. T. A. 24 action.

of America's leading scientists. He graduated from Yale in 1916 and received his doctor's degree there. Dr. Link has achieved international fame as a psychologist and his books have been translated into several foreign languages.

Dr. Link will first speak at the Faculty Club luncheon on "Personality and Education." He will then be the guest of Professor A. Alexander Magen's class in Romance where a panel discussion of "Return to Religion" will be held, and at three o'clock, he will meet the "ambassadors" to the festivities.

At four o'clock the main lecture will be given in 10-250 where Dr. Compton will preside. This meeting at which Dr. Link will speak on "Why Religion" is open to all students and faculty of the College.

In the evening the ambassadors will speak informally on "The Place of Religion in the College Man's Life." These ambassadors are president, Secretary, and members of the faculty.
