FRESHMAN CAMP
MAKE THE MOST OF IT

THE new freshman leaving for camp today, we have a few words of advice that might enable him to get more out of his stay. Remember that the men you meet will be your classmates for the next four years. Try to get to know them as well as you can. You may not have them in class and if you don't make friends now you will not have them later. You will need friends at camp.

You will need friends at camp. The outstanding activity men of the Institute will tell you about the opportunities you have for extra-curricular work. Listen to them carefully, for a reasonable amount of outside activities is necessary to round out a complete program. If there are any activities you are particularly interested in, ask the upperclassmen about them. Don't be bashful, they are only too glad to oblige.

Alumni and professors will give you some of the background of the activities of the Institute and its history and its traditions. Listen carefully, for the knowlege you pick up will make your stay here more enjoyable.

This weekend at camp and next Monday at the All-Tech Skinner you will be introduced to Technology. Make the most of it, so that when classes start you will not be a stranger here.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Now that the Institute has seen fit to warn the students about the Evils of Smoking and has chastised the boys about what they should not do, I think it is only fair to point out the good points of the cigarette.

For a considerable part of the smoking fraternity you will find it very easy to break the habit. A real camaraderie exists between smokers and nonsmokers. Any attempt at hurrying the decision now will be your classmates for the next four years. Try to get friendly with as many as you can. You may not have them in class and if you don't make friends now you will not have them later. You will need friends at camp.

You will need friends at camp. The outstanding activity men of the Institute will tell you about the opportunities you have for extra-curricular work. Listen to them carefully, for a reasonable amount of outside activities is necessary to round out a complete program. If there are any activities you are particularly interested in, ask the upperclassmen about them. Don't be bashful, they are only too glad to oblige.

Alumni and professors will give you some of the background of the activities of the Institute and its history and its traditions. Listen carefully, for the knowlege you pick up will make your stay here more enjoyable.

This weekend at camp and next Monday at the All-Tech Skinner you will be introduced to Technology. Make the most of it, so that when classes start you will not be a stranger here.

Dear Mr. Editor:

Now that the Institute has seen fit to warn the students about the Evils of Smoking and has chastised the boys about what they should not do, I think it is only fair to point out the good points of the cigarette.

For a considerable part of the smoking fraternity you will find it very easy to break the habit. A real camaraderie exists between smokers and nonsmokers. Any attempt at hurrying the decision now will be your classmates for the next four years. Try to get friendly with as many as you can. You may not have them in class and if you don't make friends now you will not have them later. You will need friends at camp.

You will need friends at camp. The outstanding activity men of the Institute will tell you about the opportunities you have for extra-curricular work. Listen to them carefully, for a reasonable amount of outside activities is necessary to round out a complete program. If there are any activities you are particularly interested in, ask the upperclassmen about them. Don't be bashful, they are only too glad to oblige.

Alumni and professors will give you some of the background of the activities of the Institute and its history and its traditions. Listen carefully, for the knowlege you pick up will make your stay here more enjoyable.

This weekend at camp and next Monday at the All-Tech Skinner you will be introduced to Technology. Make the most of it, so that when classes start you will not be a stranger here.