VOTE TOMORROW
ON JAPANESE BOYCOTT

WITH the boycott movement against Japan at its height, an opinion of student opinion is both timely and important. Now that feelings over the Panama incident are somewhat subsiding, it is possible to make a comparatively rational decision.

The issue, is whether, or course, we are to curb Japan's imperialist ambitions, specifically in China, and whether a boycott would be worthwhile in this respect. From an economic point of view, it seems true that such a boycott would materially impair Japan's economic life. From a purely psychological point of view, however, the effect of a boycott would be uncertain. The ties are really a mark of distinction that makes everyone in the halls cordial and helps to bring men together.

Next year freshmen will buy ties and probably nine out of ten will wear them for a long time. Upperclassmen will turn their heads and say they are ugly and dirty and a burden, but they are glad to see the introduction of the new men. The custom is a good one and will last as long as the boycott continues.

The housing program which was started this fall has come to be taken for granted. Now that the dormitory has been completed, freshmen have found that the dorm is not a desirable place to live for the first year and are willing to go back to the residence halls.

Individuality

Individuality is a personal characteristic that we should strive to maintain in our actions and decisions. It is important for students to develop their own unique perspectives and viewpoints, rather than conforming to the expectations of others.

The interests of the United States are of paramount importance when it comes to deciding on a course of action. We should consider the impact of our decisions on both domestic and international fronts.

Since our only other reader, our Old Roommate, is in Japan, we have not had the opportunity to read his views on government curbs on exports to and imports from Japan. The ties are really a mark of distinction that makes everyone in the halls cordial and helps to bring men together.

The issue is whether we want to curb Japan's imperialist ambitions, specifically in China, and whether a boycott would be worthwhile in this respect.

T. C. A.

(Continued from Page 1)

almost unprecedented number of stu- dents were present yesterday and building a little in line to check out the announcements. It was surprising to see the approval of individu- ality voiced by those who are critical of the dormitory system. The fact that the dormitory has been completed does not mean that it is a desirable place to live for the first year.

Since our only other reader, our Old Roommate, is in Japan, we have not had the opportunity to read his views on government curbs on exports to and imports from Japan.

The issue is whether we want to curb Japan's imperialist ambitions, specifically in China, and whether a boycott would be worthwhile in this respect.

T. C. A.

(Continued from Page 1)

almost unprecedented number of stu- dents were present yesterday and building a little in line to check out the announcements. It was surprising to see the approval of individu- ality voiced by those who are critical of the dormitory system. The fact that the dormitory has been completed does not mean that it is a desirable place to live for the first year.

Since our only other reader, our Old Roommate, is in Japan, we have not had the opportunity to read his views on government curbs on exports to and imports from Japan.

The issue is whether we want to curb Japan's imperialist ambitions, specifically in China, and whether a boycott would be worthwhile in this respect.

T. C. A.

(Continued from Page 1)

almost unprecedented number of stu- dents were present yesterday and building a little in line to check out the announcements. It was surprising to see the approval of individu- ality voiced by those who are critical of the dormitory system. The fact that the dormitory has been completed does not mean that it is a desirable place to live for the first year.

Since our only other reader, our Old Roommate, is in Japan, we have not had the opportunity to read his views on government curbs on exports to and imports from Japan.

The issue is whether we want to curb Japan's imperialist ambitions, specifically in China, and whether a boycott would be worthwhile in this respect.