"The Sheik" Sends Open Letter
Setting Forth Merits
As Dream Man

Technology coeds returned from vacations yesterday to find that Jerris Claus had brought them a "Dream Man" for Christmas. Posted on the bulletin board in the Margaret Cheney Room was the following letter:

Adonis the Writer
Massachusetts Institute of Technology,

Girl:

You need look no further. Send one dollar to cover the cost of photo
tion of your dream man.

Yours sincerely,
ALAN L. LEWIS.

The writer explained that he was known as Adonis, Tarzan, Apollo, The Sheik, and various other titles as well as Adonis the Writer.

"Please all don't rush at once," the letter read, "as I expect to be tremendously busy."

The Sheik, "and various other titles known as Adonis, Tarzan, Appollo,
tion of your dream man."

"No activity" men had more students in minor executive positions, but onlyi in major executive positions, while 296 succeeded outside of their academic field, and 147 in allied fields.

The authors, however, tell us that "the men who remain in their academic field do not have as great a tenure than normal; they included a very high proportion of inventors and research men, although few executives.

Publications men followed the normal curve, with a high percentage in minor executive positions, but only a few as major executives.

Officer Rank High

Class officers r a n k e d definitely above average in grades and led all other groups as both major and minor executives.

Falling below normal in ratings and yielding a large proportion of inventors and research men were the fraternity men while the members average grades below normal and a low percentage of executives.

in the top tenth of the class than any other group. The "brown-bag-cover" also married latest and supplied the largest proportion of inventors and educators and the smallest percentage of executives.
