Inst. Comm. (Continued from page 1)

regard of the dues payment.

Balfus governing the by-laws of a non-campus organization are under the jurisdiction of the Institute Committee. Non-payment of the dues establishes the activity involved as a non-campus fine, and non-payment for three charges is grounds for Institute expulsion.

Dramashop Protests Charges

Despite Balfus’ assertion that the organization named has received adequate notice of the solons’ intentions and are thus liable for a one-dollar fine by virtue of "recognition," a word coined by the Institute Committee president, John J. Wallace, ’38, Dramashop protested the charges against itself through a spokesman, newly elected President James C. Dugan, ’39.

"Dramashop is solvent, a live activity," according to Dugan. "We suggest that the five-dollar fine be moderated and that the Institute Committee request lists of financially responsible officers, membership, and faculty advisors as a means for determining whether an activity is alive."

Dr. Philip H. Lippitt, professor of dramatic arts, released the following statement:

"The organization objects to the move to remove it from the list of corporate members of the Institute Committee, and it will be noted that the Institute Committee is the body of the students named having received the notice of the solons’ intention.

A few may be taken, however, if they are necessary, to place the Institute Committee in the company of the Executive Committee, and to give the Institute Committee the power to remove a corporation from the roll of corporate members where there are reasons for believing that an activity is alive."

"We intend to remove recognition from Dramashop," Lippitt continued. "We suggest that the five-dollar fine be moderated and that the Institute Committee request lists of financially responsible members, membership, and faculty advisors as a means for determining whether an activity is alive."

The excited legislator was calmed to a non-campus fine by President Wallace who apologized for the distraction and declared that no offense had been had and none should be taken.

Attica Made On Budget Committee

In addition to Dramashop’s objections, the budget committee and the vice-president of the Executive Committee, Frederick J. Eells, Jr., were also attacked this time by Dr. Philip H. Lippitt, Professor of Dramatic Arts and Dean of the School of Fine Arts.

"We will not, therefore, recommend that the Institute Committee and the Executive Committee be in the company of the Executive Committee," Lippitt informed the legislature.

"We intend to remove recognition from Dramashop."

The excited legislator was calmed by President Wallace who apologized for the distraction and declared that no offense had been had and none should be taken.

Attica Made On Budget Committee

In addition to Dramashop’s objections, the budget committee and the vice-president of the Executive Committee, Frederick J. Eells, Jr., were also attacked this time by Dr. Philip H. Lippitt, Professor of Dramatic Arts and Dean of the School of Fine Arts.

"We will not, therefore, recommend that the Institute Committee and the Executive Committee be in the company of the Executive Committee," Lippitt informed the legislature.

"We intend to remove recognition from Dramashop."