Representation (Continued from page 1)

Winged Senate Committee's Activities

Retaliation to Vincent's proposal and answers to his challenge to his underclass colleagues in "present valid reasons why they should be seated here" was led by William F. Wingard, President of the Junior Class. The Institute Committee should act as a "check valve," said Wingard.

While the Junior executive then stated that the group would have large membership should be maintained so that the group would have "enough people to vote to make -voting system, Wingard pointed out that the purpose of the committee was to provide a "check on stuff like that." At a previous meeting the committee had reduction of representation was reported, as expressed by John J. Wallace, Emil Kolb, Jr., and Richard Muther, that the executive committee cited the now defunct point system because it was "not doing its job." At a February meeting the Clef was tabled after a reading of written excuses, the Institute Committee as approved. Robert C. Casselman, '39, Nicholas E. Carr, Jr., '39, as officers of the Undergraduate Constitution, was tabled, which establishes regulations for the acceptance of undergraduate constitutions. By a majority of the increase, held voting members upon taking office.

F. M. LEE

45 Storrs St., Boston Mass.

LLECTED Opponents of a continuation of dis,bution were voiced by Wingard, who observed that the members were "going to be late to dinner." It was a final plea for a closer of the discus-son. Wingard pointed out that the purpose of the committee was to pre-
"check on stuff like that." At
a previous meeting the committee had
reduction of representation was
reported, as expressed by John J. Wallace,
Emil Kolb, Jr., and Richard Muther, that
the executive committee cited the now defunct point
system because it was "not doing its job." At a February meeting
the Clef was tabled after a reading
of written excuses, the Institute Committee as
approved. Robert C. Casselman, '39,
Nicholas E. Carr, Jr., '39, as officers
of the Undergraduate
Constitution, was tabled, which
establishes regulations for the acceptance
of undergraduate constitutions. By a majority of the increase, held voting
members upon taking office.

F. M. LEE

45 Storrs St., Boston Mass.

LLECTED Opponents of a continuation of dis-
,bution were voiced by Wingard, who
observed that the members were
"going to be late to dinner." It was a
final plea for a closer of the discus-
son. Wingard pointed out that the
purpose of the committee was to pre-
"check on stuff like that." At
a previous meeting the committee had
reduction of representation was
reported, as expressed by John J. Wallace,
Emil Kolb, Jr., and Richard Muther, that
the executive committee cited the now defunct point
system because it was "not doing its job." At a February meeting
the Clef was tabled after a reading
of written excuses, the Institute Committee as
approved. Robert C. Casselman, '39,
Nicholas E. Carr, Jr., '39, as officers
of the Undergraduate
Constitution, was tabled, which
establishes regulations for the acceptance
of undergraduate constitutions. By a majority of the increase, held voting
members upon taking office.

F. M. LEE

45 Storrs St., Boston Mass.

LLECTED Opponents of a continuation of dis-
,bution were voiced by Wingard, who
observed that the members were
"going to be late to dinner." It was a
final plea for a closer of the discus-
son. Wingard pointed out that the purpose of the committee was to pre-
"check on stuff like that." At
a previous meeting the committee had
reduction of representation was
reported, as expressed by John J. Wallace,
Emil Kolb, Jr., and Richard Muther, that
the executive committee cited the now defunct point
system because it was "not doing its job." At a February meeting
the Clef was tabled after a reading
of written excuses, the Institute Committee as
approved. Robert C. Casselman, '39,
Nicholas E. Carr, Jr., '39, as officers
of the Undergraduate
Constitution, was tabled, which
establishes regulations for the acceptance
of undergraduate constitutions. By a majority of the increase, held voting
members upon taking office.

F. M. LEE

45 Storrs St., Boston Mass.