Walden Library Association collects used books from the general public in boxes set up in railroad stations and other public places. While many good books thus received in this way, the Boston is particularly anxious to have technologically inclined, books on science subjects. It is hoped that many of these valuable books will be purchased by the members of the library association.

The strongest statement — the best advertising — is to tell somebody about a product that the user can prove for himself...

A lot of smokers have found that Chesterfields have a taste they like... that Chesterfields are MILD...

You can prove for yourself that Chesterfields SATISFY.
