No beer was wasted. When reduced pressure stopped the pump, the barrels were tipped up and the dregs were poured off.

Not to be outdone by his comrade-in-beers, this enterprising member of the paper turned directly to the kegs.

This gentleman may or may not have been dodging the flashlight bulb which landed on the radiator behind him.