VOLUNTARY R.O.T.C. FOR TECHNOLOGY

One of the most vital questions of student interest on the polls this week was that of the R.O.T.C. The results show that more than half of those who voted were in favor of voluntary military training, while only about one cent advocated that the United States have no R.O.T.C. at Technology.

Further than this, the poll showed that almost all those who voted were apparently willing to fight if the United States were invaded, while less than a quarter wanted to fight if the United States were to apply effective economic sanctions. The results show that the vast majority of Technology men are not in favor of having the graduated students remain on the campus in rapid succession, they take little jibes at the ridiculousness of the present gymnasium facilities in comparison with the adequacies of the Institute layout as a whole. In an effort to make it as an Institute as it would look in a warped mirror; another showed the buildings about to tumble down, while the latest poll was few that would object to the return of the great court, and the most recent shows a close-up of the storm battered entrance to the hangar with the china running across the floor. The house furnished grand entrance to the Technology gymnasium, showing the remarkable interior lighting. It appears doubtful that even the most ardent student of the R.O.T.C. would long withstand such a barrage of literature; it seems that all are bound to go in before long if not for no nobler reason than to put the stop to those ghastly phenomena upon this unbalanced situation caused by abominable condition of athletic facilities of the alma mater. Of course it is not the unfortunate; the former section was pleased for raising of money; a time when it seemed that prosperity was on the way in but when conditions were actually to take an unforeseen turn for the worse. Even, the plans have been laid and the drive started. It is too late to turn back and the host procedure seems to make the best of conditions and eke out the necessary cash shilled by shiel.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Though the ideas put forward in the letter from the Executive Committee of the Technology Arts and Sciences issue of March 22 are attractive to the emotions I do not think that they will stand rational consideration.

Fascism is in a national disease is caused at least to the national appeal of raw materials. (The fundamental cause in the general vitality of human society.) The cure proposed by the Executive Committee is to deny to the fascist nations what raw materials they think can only obtain.

The United States could impose sanctions of the sort suggested with fair safety to itself. It is quite possible that our own resources would be sufficient to our own needs. Nautical Association Opens Racing Season

Three intercollegiate regattas are to be featured.

With three intercollegiate regatta entries the Nautical Association will open the spring racing season on Saturday, March 26, one week later than usual.

On April 13 and 20 Technology will be represented at the Boston Yacht Racing Association, and on May 28 at the Eastern Yacht Club. The central trophy, held in a field of six teams, contains a trophy cup, given by Mr. John H. Mathews, Jr., and Mr. H. W. T. Morse of the Eastern Yacht Club. All of the in America to date have been won by the Eastern Yacht Club. Entries seem to be as good this year, as the intercollegiate dinghies rig up fast, but may have to be modified to the condition of the weather by Brown, R.O.T.C. commander.

An amendment of the by-laws of the Nautical Association to allow the secretary to act in the capacity of the Treasurer, was approved.

The treasurer shall transmit to the secretary, the amounts of all members' subscriptions to the organization. The treasurer shall keep the Secretary of the Nautical Association in the knowledge of all monies received.

I Have Seen: The Nightingale, by Leo Tolstoy.

The M. L. T. Orchestra, under Mr. Robert J. Schellenberg, will give a season of three numbers, "Selections from 'L'assassin';" "March from Goyescas," by Granados, and a selection from "Ludwig." The second half of the program will be similar to last year's, the Musicology Club singing first, then the Fencibles Society, and a joint number at the end.

Next Concert is With Lassell. The principal of the M. L. T. Glee Club will be with Lassell Junior College at Longwood Towers, on April 9. This will be the first of two concerts with Lassell, the second one being on May 7 at Lassell.
