This column is, of course, aimed primarily at the entering class of students. It is sometimes called "The Freshmen’s Column".

One of the things you freshmen can do (if the camp grounds succeed in getting the entire class together) is that old joke, "A healthy mind in a healthy body." This being the case we feel no need to talk about it.

But there is one other thing you should know about and that is sports. For some, in fact, the main reason for coming to Tech is to play some sport. And, of course, you'll have to choose one—give up your chance to play any game you want for as long as you want to.

Tech teams are not built only on the principle of boasting old Domedus, one against another. Winning a game is something, of course, that they all try for; but Tech coaches do not lose sight of the main aim of sports—which, after all, is fun, fair play and exercise for the players.

It is for that reason that Tech sports are open to all and if there are facilities to take care of all the players, first seeing or otherwise.
