GLEVE FIGHT IS STRUGGLE FOR SISSIES

Compared to Oldtime Cane Rush

Debating and the few bruises sustained in the glove fight today are marks of glory, and distinction. But compared to its ancestor in Tech lore, the glove fight is only in an axiomatic offshoot.

Both in the days when men wore buckskin and the hair on their chest grew black and curly, there arose an institution known as the Cane Rush, which took place after the annual Freshman-Sophomore football game. Idea of the rush was for the Sophomore to put as many hands as possible on the cane which the freshmen guarded. Anything went. If the freshmen won they had the right to carry cans; if they lost, the freshmen could be recognized by their caneless walk.

The main rush was much the same as in former years. The freshmen were given possession of the cane and the Sophomores attacked their formation about it by using wedges. The scrimmage lasted fifteen minutes and, as usual, some of the most spectacular fighting began with the tearing of the pitcher as a signal to cease the struggle. When the men who held the cane were finally uncovered it was found that the Sophomores had won the rush with no serious hands. The freshmen having but one hand on the stick.

Prof. Schaefer and Major Nisley Talk

Professor Schaefer, from the department of Engineering of M.I.T., and Major Harold Nisley, of the Military Science Department, entertained the G.S.C. Club at a bountiful smoket last Friday evening in the Walker Clubroom. Professor Schaefer presented an imaginative and humorous account of his college days at Harvard.

swimming Tomatoes, oranges, cucumbers, bananas, asparagus, and fish, all of which had long ago seen their best days. The freshmen were reduced to children's hands and feet when they started. A marked improvement.

"Three years ago, by agreement between the two lower classes, no guard was to be slain in the fray, and thus we have the Glove Fight as it was handed down to the modern Technology men."

You'll find smokers everywhere sweeping Chesterfields with them all day long. They add to your pleasure when you're on the job and when you take a night off.

It takes good things to make a good product. That's why we use the best ingredients a cigarette can have—mild ripe tobaccos and pure cigarette paper—to make Chesterfield the cigarette that smokers say is milder and better-tasting.
