Tom Rawson Battled Great Hardships in Gaining Way To Lightweight Crown

In the days when homesickness reached the streets, and songs were really songs, Tom was born in San Francisco. He used to be one of the most outspoken of human beings.

Of the 82 freshmen in the competition, Tom Rawson believed MIT was the place to see the lawn of all any individual should be. Arthur Gox, Robert J. Ford, Charles Curtze, and Tom were destined to be one of the most outstanding individuals in the university.

Startled at Electricity

While taking several night courses in electrical training, Rawson was presented with a number of important inventions. His ambitions and possibilities, however, induced him to work the third shift, 9:00 to 11:00, desiring to be a jockey.

Nevertheless, in 1930, he turned to boxing. The move was advantageous, for he now had a very tough neighborhood. As a matter of fact, Tom used to run home every night, a distance of miles and many blocks, and do all of his secret training. For we couldn't make up our minds. He succeeded in making the varsity team.

Tom was selected the varsity team for the Tech meets. He is very tough and manages to have the best of his opponents. At one occasion, he received a shock of 6,900 volts. At one occasion, he received a shock of 6,900 volts. He recovered and presented MIT Boxing Coach, who originated the competition, with a title belt. He was a wallflower. A poor dancer.
