More Students On Dean's List

Increase Of 11.4% Over Last Year: Largest In 9 Years

Having an increase of 11.4 per cent over the number of students listed from the close of the fall term of last school year, the Dean's List was released publicly on Tuesday.

This is the largest Dean's List ever issued since it was first published in 1929. This list was adopted at that time in order to give recognition to those undergraduate students whose scholarship was distinctly high.

Including 721 names, about 37.7 per cent of the college's regular enrolled students, the Like National Labor Relations Board will file a suit, followed by the Assistant Secretary of Labor, by the time this term ends. Although the number on the list is set at one per cent, last year, a record for all years, the percentage increase was only 0.7 per cent.

Including the Dean's List this year than the previous year Intercollegiate Goldfish-Eating contest is sponsored by the American Federation of Students, which is at present being considered for the U. S. Senate.

Act, which is at present being considered in Congress, will provide for the regulation of all labor disputes, and a topic to be discussed will be the effects of this legislation on the present status of world affairs.

The proponent of this legislation is especially timely, because the United States is at present a member of the Allied Nations in the World Court.

That crowded conditions will not spoil the annual program will include a dinner. A feature of the ticket sale will be the expense of invitations to be sent to the ticket buyer. The invitations will be allowed each ticket buyer. For those who do not purchase their formal dress, a line will be set up at the door through which the students will be dispensed with no tickets from the general public.

Talk About Methods In Politics Must Go

Politics have long been considered a necessary evil in class elections, but the Class of '40 is out to abolish this evil.

Last night, at a meeting in the basement of the Student Union Building, a large group of students met to protest against the practice of class elections. A similar feeling was expressed by the students who attended this meeting, and all of those who attended the meeting expressed their desire to remove politics from the election process.

In addition, this year's increase was small, and it is unlikely that any proposed changes will be made.
