Dear Mr. McGinnis:

In your opinion that the second derivative will eventually replace the first or am I too previous? I notice in the writing of Hitchens's Proof that the path is a triangle from the bottom of the page, that an apparent error has been made in juxtaposition. Is it your feeling that this has been done deliberately or was it merely by play on the part of the composer? Corrigenda oppose suggesting gradual change slightly to extra-carat activity and inverted spectrum or is it merely my imagination? Do you agree with me when I state Hitchens is too too thinly evoked and is it a fact that Trumel is having too hard time on the old masters lately? I understand the old masters can't take it.

Beatrice.

Carl S. McGinnis, Esq.

P.S. Was it very cold...?
