Sailors Drop Boston Races Last Sunday

Light Winds, Darkness Combine To Defeat Technology

VICTORY BID FAILS

Win, in the form of darkness and a field wind, smacked certain victory from two Technology dynasty crews as the various crews of the M.I.T. and Harvard crews had bothCrew Races which were held on the Charles River all day Sunday. Starting from 10:00 A.M. until 3:00 P.M. the races continued in the remaining trials in the morning unless interfered with by a fresh wind. From a full entry list of nineteen contestants, five colleges including Tech, survived the elimination runs.

As the first races were begun in the afternoon, the brisk wind of the morning actually helped to break the usual wind with the wind running from the left bank. Four of the second field races forced the Tech Crews, led by Williams College and Brandeis, to the right, by mean of three, plus. However, the last race was started and despite the wind, both Technology.IsDBNulleaters definitely gained a smile and over their rivals. With two or two ties the race went, with the winning being off on account of darkness.

Williams Wins Regatta

Williams College won the regatta, with M.I.T. placing second, and Brandeis, third. Jerome T. Cox, '42, captured one dinghy, with Francis L. Holley, '41, serving as his crew, while Ryanus Colla, '09, piloted the other boat with Delevan B. Dowser, '09, as crew.
