BEAVER TALES
By Jack Quinn

Typical of the current upward trend in Beaver sports, this year’s wrestlers finished second in a season marked by a surprising 39% in the weight classes. This represents an upsurge of 7% over the 1939-40 season.

As this season comes to an end, Beaver’s wrestlers have earned a position among the state’s top teams. This is a significant improvement over last year’s record, which was 1-7.

The season has been marked by a number of notable performances. The most impressive was the performance of Captain Bill Green, who captured the state’s championship in the 120-pound class. This is the first time a Beaver wrestler has won the championship.

Other notable performances include the performances of Bob Johnson, who won the state’s championship in the 150-pound class, and Mike Biancardi, who placed fourth in the state’s championship in the 160-pound class.

Overall, the season has been one of growth and improvement for the Beaver wrestling team. The future looks bright for Beaver wrestling, and it is hoped that this season’s success will serve as a foundation for even greater achievements in the years to come.
