Sharp Decline In Number Of Voters
Is Revealed By Elections Committee
A sharp decline in the number of voters to the voting poll was revealed in an announcement made last night by the Elections Committee regarding the total vote cast.
Particularly noticeable was the drop in the junior class in the Class of 1942. From 602, out of a possible 550, who voted in last year's class, only 320, or 58.8%, voted in this year's class.

Junior class meetings brought out only two men seeking most of the important positions.

Fred Levis, in favor of the Freshman class, turned out in the largest numbers. Nearly four hundred ballots were cast, and after those which did not follow the directions were eliminated, 305 ballots for president of the class were left. The Class of 1943 had brought out 396 voters, while the seniors, facing...

A great decline in the average of the numbers voting has been observed also in recent years. Consistent with this has been a drop in the number of candidates running for each office. Before 1936 there were almost invariably five or more candidates running for each available position. This has decreased to an average this year of only two men seeking most of the important offices.
