The Reader Speaks

To the Editor:

Tragedy is the second issue of VooDoo that phosphorous has graced with its presence. People with a healthy fear of the Inmates and an abiding respect for the traditions and philosophy of this venerable publication can always be counted on to bring us a thoroughly original and thought-provoking piece of writing.

The issue that has been most widely discussed is the one that deals with the history of VooDoo. This is a piece that will be read and re-read for its clarity of thought and its ability to get to the heart of the matter.

The second piece of note is the one that deals with the current state of the world and its implications for the future. This is a piece that will be read and re-read for its ability to anticipate the future and its ability to inspire action.

The third piece of note is the one that deals with the personal lives of the VooDoo staff. This is a piece that will be read and re-read for its ability to bring us closer to the people who make VooDoo what it is.

Finally, the fourth piece of note is the one that deals with the politics of the world. This is a piece that will be read and re-read for its ability to make us think and for its ability to make us act.

In short, the second issue of VooDoo is a masterpiece of writing. It is a piece that will be read and re-read for its ability to make us think and for its ability to make us act.

Sincerely,

Mortimer W. Meyer, Jr.
