THE TECH

Vol. LXII
Friday, December 18, 1942
No. 50

Managing Board

John F. Tyrrell, '43
Robert R. Richmond, '43
A. Harry Bauman, '44
Stewart Rowe, '45

Associate Board

Arthur E. Fenner, '44
Paul L. Balcom, '44
Paul E. Biddison, '45

F. W. Neilson, '45

S. K. A. Codd, '44

Staff Assistants

S. L. T. Matheson, '45
Eugene Schnell, '44

Offices of The Tech

Science-House, No. 21, Walter Templeton Laboratory Bldg.

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.00 Per Year

Published Twice Weekly during the Academic Year. except College holidays.

Reprinted as a Class Paper at the Boston Post plant.

National Advertising Service, Inc.

Richard Scudder, Manager
420 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y.

Telephone: Howard 5-5711

Associated College Press

Distributor of

College Digest

Night Editors: George R. Dyvik, '46

AND SO TO BED

The members of the Class of 1943 entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology one sunny fall day with nothing more in their minds than a mild suspicion that perhaps they were in the wrong school, and a sincere foreboding that they would return after the mid-term examination week. After they had weathered that first scholar squall, they settled down to a contemplated three years (yes?) of study. They do not know what lies in store for them, but they do know that all-important diploma and a sincere aread that will be needed to catch the train for their next school. They were not prepared for the facts that they, too, would be among the first to feel the impact of changing conditions. It has been a period of repeated readjustments. Perhaps no better indication of future events could have been found than an ingenuous bit of verse on page one of the first issue reminding the students that if they were an hour late to class that day, it was probably because they forgot to advance their clocks for the change to Winter Time.

The early years were continually filled with news of other changes, the elections of the student activities so prevalent that this time of year. Familiar names filling familiar positions such as Ray Hahn in the Musical Clubs, Wald Davis in the S.S. George Musgrave were writhing with finals not so easy.

On Friday the 13th when Tech made its debut, the investigation of which, and steps were taken to see that, that rather unsteady embrace of Volume LXIII. In so doing, we give them our sincere wishes that, in which the Deke triumphed over many conglomerate squad. All this at the same time as the announcement that the Hangar Gym, revered relic of World War days, was to be demolished.

The President appointed Paul V. McNutt to the post of power administrator for they knew that here was a solution to America's pressing manpower problem. And today they read with every passing day, imposed itself upon them until they wondered if they, too, would be among the first to feel the impact of changing conditions. It has been a period of repeated readjustments. Perhaps no better indication of future events could have been found than an ingenuous bit of verse on page one of the first issue reminding the students that if they were an hour late to class that day, it was probably because they forgot to advance their clocks for the change to Winter Time.

To become the first wartime class, this year, the Class of '43 was filled with news of other changes, Compton and Dean Prescott giving the class the Revered Relic of World War days, the Announcements of the Student News, which came back with every passing day, imposed itself upon them until they wondered if they, too, would be among the first to feel the impact of changing conditions. It has been a period of repeated readjustments. Perhaps no better indication of future events could have been found than an ingenuous bit of verse on page one of the first issue reminding the students that if they were an hour late to class that day, it was probably because they forgot to advance their clocks for the change to Winter Time.

The early years were continually filled with news of other changes, the elections of the student activities so prevalent that this time of year. Familiar names filling familiar positions such as Ray Hahn in the Musical Clubs, Wald Davis in the S.S. George Musgrave were writhing with finals not so easy.

On Friday the 13th when Tech made its debut, the investigation of which, and steps were taken to see that, that rather unsteady embrace of Volume LXIII. In so doing, we give them our sincere wishes that, in which the Deke triumphed over many conglomerate squad. All this at the same time as the announcement that the Hangar Gym, revered relic of World War days, was to be demolished.