South American Student Airs Feelings On Pan-American Study

The substance of this article appears at the beginning of a speech delivered by a member of a group of friends. One of the South Americans who was actually present at the meeting at which the speech was delivered and the Changing World was discussed is reported to have made the following statement:

In discussing American problems with some of the students, I was much interested in their reactions to the various points which were brought up. In answering questions on the subject of Pan-Americanism, I was glad to find that some of the students had been actively interested in the subject, while others had not. I was particularly interested in the reactions of those who were not actively interested, as I felt that this was the group which was least likely to be influenced by the ideas presented at the meeting.

Mr. Mowry, for instance, presents the results of his research in the field of Pan-Americanism, but his conclusions are not always consistent. Invariably such a tendency arises in the pleasant atmosphere of the study room. The complexity of the problems as a whole is often underestimated, and Americans fail to realize the common acquaintance with philosophy, which nowadays seem to be highly prized. We should also keep in mind that national politicians. Intelligent Americans at M.I.T. when I stressed the necessity or the circumstances or necessities to survive. In the opinion of Prof. Walter K. Smart, some families have made it a common theory. To study the conditions of life in the world, it is the duty of this generation to give an unprejudiced start on the path which will mature the social sciences.

Mr. Mowry, besides the extremely tactful treatment of the subject, was not quoted, could not hesitate to say that women in Peru need a written permit from the government to travel freely on trains or on other transportation. In my opinion, and I do not recall ever having seen any commissioner checking upon married women's permits. I was amused when I visualized the hard time an American would have checking the crowded trains and buses of Lima.

Some families have great political influence, and some families have made it a common theory. To study the conditions of life in the world, it is the duty of this generation to give an unprejudiced start on the path which will mature the social sciences.

Mr. Mowry stated that our society is quite similar to that of the United States. They do not have, however, any means of assurance as to the exact nature of the various problems which they have to face. In some cases, they belong to conservative parties, while in others they are overshadowed by the growing liberal trend.

It seems to be rather well established that our society is quite similar to that of the United States. They do not have, however, any means of assurance as to the exact nature of the various problems which they have to face. In some cases, they belong to conservative parties, while in others they are overshadowed by the growing liberal trend.

I am speaking for most Latin Americans at M.I.T. when I stress the importance of the work which is being done. The results of the research in this field are encouraging. It is the duty of this generation to give an unprejudiced start on the path which will mature the social sciences.
