Dorm Evacues

First Meteorology "B"

Detachment Arrived Yesterday Afternoon

With the exception of two student detachments that were expected to remain in the dormitory for the weekend, the evacuation of all dormitory students will begin today. The meteorology students are among those still in residence, in preparation for their final exams, according to Professor Leicester F. Billings of the Meteorology Department.

Of those students who were forced to evacuate University 280 in advance of the hurricane, the dormitory will become a temporary home for the students. The dormitory will be opened to接收 these students as a temporary shelter, as well as for those who may need to evacuate their homes during the storm. The dormitory is located at the end of Huntington Avenue and is accessible by bus or trolley. Students are encouraged to evacuate their homes and seek shelter in the dormitory to avoid the storm's impact.

S.A.E. Phone Number

Is Still KEW-NIO

The phone number for the S.A.E. has been changed to KEW-NIO. This change was made to enhance the organization's visibility and accessibility, as well as to increase its contact with students and the general public. The phone number is provided to facilitate communication with S.A.E. members, who are working on a variety of projects related to engineering and technology. Students and others who are interested in supporting S.A.E. are encouraged to call the new phone number to learn more about its activities and ways to get involved.
