Mrs. Magidoff Terms American Sacrifices "Beautiful Picnic"

"The sacrifices you are making here are like a beautiful picnic compared to those being made in Russia," said Mrs. Nila Magidoff in her speech last Wednesday to about 100 students and other persons who gathered in the Eastman Lecture Hall. Mrs. Magidoff reported the sighted examples of the great sacrifices being made by the Russians, and the equally great strides they have advanced in the few years of fighting.

She said that one hour after the news of the German attack on Russia reached the people in Moscow, several of the factories busied themselves to try to do what they could to help. This was on a Sunday, and though every day was crowded, every day yielded more results, the subways, apparently, were not crowded, and the people were evacuated to the country. Likewise the art treasures were removed.

"Mrs. Magidoff is in Moscow during the war, and she has written a book about the civil defense activities of the city.

Those students who obtained a uniform background for photographing the Class of 1944 must have their pictures taken on this date. The photographs will be circulated amongst collegiate debating associations throughout the nation.

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss the future policy of the society, and the necessary preparations for the coming season. The meeting will be held at 8:00 P.M. on March 22. It is expected that all students and officers of the society will attend.

Women's Part

Mrs. Magidoff held the opinion that the Russian government had been preparing for war for some time. She said it was general knowledge at the time the peace pact with Germany was signed that they were preparing for war on the left hand, and preparing for war with the left hand. For example, before the war was imposed, there were thousands of motorcycles in Soviet Russia, and every student received several pairs of special gloves to fight incendiary bombs. The use of these gloves was credited with putting out a goodly percentage of the bombs that were dropped on Moscow.

Rallying the crowd, Mrs. Magidoff had also been doing a great deal of work in educating the American public about the situation in the Soviet republic of the country. She herself spent two years in such work, and has been writing articles who volunteered to do it.

"It is a unique position to see that the people of America are being prepared for the coming war," said Mrs. Magidoff. "We must be prepared for war, and we must be prepared for peace."
