U. S. Citizens To Help Build New Civilization
Columbia Univ. Prof. Envisions Wonderful Postwar Opportunities

An opportunity to build a new world civilization will confront the United States and her allies on the day this armistice is signed, declared Prof. Lyman Bryson, chancellor emeritus and chief of the bureau of special services of the office of war information.

Prof. Bryson told 814 Cornellians that only a few precious years remain in which to make the necessary preparation for this opportunity.

"It is now or never," he said. "We must lay the foundations of a new world civilization in this generation."

"Our forefathers did not make the world of our own day, nor can the recent British warning to Germany, nor the Eire Eight, nor our own situation alter this fact."

Prof. Bryson believes that in the next year or two the United States can bring about a peaceful secure and prosperous world in which the people of America will have a place.

American people in the postwar world civilization will confront the world that comes after the war will be one in which those who believe in freedom will be allowed to live by it, and those who believe in violence will be restrained.

The postwar period should not be regarded merely as an opportunity for reparations. It is an opportunity to create an all-purpose world organization. It is impossible to foresee what the United States can do in the time left us. It is also impossible to say what the world will be like after the war.

But before we can hope to accomplish anything of importance it is necessary that we lay the foundations of a new world civilization in this generation.

Northwestern University Frosh Reveals Plans For War Program

By A.C.P.
Northwestern University's educational program for the duration will be 1) to help defeat the Axis, 2) to contribute educational opportunities for women students, men in deferred service, and freshmen under proper control, and 3) to cooperate with the army in a manner that will not prevent the university from carrying on its regular educational work for students who are not in the armed service, President Snyder said. He emphasized that housing facilities will be available for the underclassmen.

President Snyder said 17 year old students who wish a full year of college training after the fall will be able to take courses which have been strength ened in the fields of mathematics, physical science and biology, pre-medicine, and pre-dentistry.

Social Life

Concerning the impact of the war on college social life, President Snyder said the university is carrying on many such programs, he said.

"This two-sided program was announced by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in a message to Congress and to the Senate on December 23, 1941, and President Snyder said that the program is being carried out under the supervision of President Roosevelt and the armed forces.

The university, President Snyder said, will cooperate with the army in making available service training programs to the limits of its capacity. Already the university has been carrying out a number of such programs, he said.

Regular Programs

Continuation of an extensive war program will prevent the university from carrying on its regular educational work for students who are not in the armed service, President Snyder said.
