"By the end of this year the strength of the Navy's fleet will be equal to that of all other navies combined. This amazing increase in the Navy's capacity to operate in all parts of the world was revealed by Rear Admiral Edward T. Cochrane, commander of the North Pacific Fleet, in his Military Address delivered at Harvard University.

The Admiral proclaimed that the Navy had increased its strength in the last five years to a level comparable to that of the World War I era. He stated that the Navy's ability to operate in all parts of the world has been enhanced by the development of new ships, weapons, and tactics.

The Admiral also emphasized the importance of education and training in preparing the Navy for future conflicts. He called for the development of a comprehensive training program to prepare officers and enlisted men for the challenges of modern warfare.
