Third Lecture

Discusses Results
Of Statistical Studies

"Lessons From Statistical Studies of Marriage" was the subject of the third in the current series of lecture being given by Prof. Alexander Magoun under the sponsorship of the T.C.A. Over 600 people attended the lectures at 4:00 and 5:00 P.M. yesterday afternoon in Huntington Hall.

Professor Magoun's talk, which is illustrated with several slides, mainly with the results of various studies, surveys and polls which were conducted to ascertain the conditions which made for a happy marriage. According to two of these studies, the most important single factor in determining if marriage will be successful is whether the couple's parents were happily married.
