Contest Undecided After Two Rough Overtime Periods

The M.T. soccer team ended a successful season last Saturday by defeating the Harvard Indians 2-0. It was the first time the Tech team had looked as good as it even draw with its upperclassmen neighbors in over two decades.

It was a long contest featured by two overtime periods during which both teams rushed to break the deadlock. However, class defensive play with a duo mostly fielded their best efforts. In fact, the weather was the most formidable factor in the contest, with the ankle-deep mud making fast breaks and smooth teamwork nearly impossible.

Tech scored first early in the game on a shot by Dave Bixby, but Harvard tied it up before the half ended. In the third quarter the Crimson took a 1-0 lead, but another pretty effort by Rizzo-Paterson kept the count.

The game and the field were ragged from there on. M.T. just managed to add to a Missouri finish to the game when a scramble in front of the Harvard goal with only 15 minutes left was ruled the winning margin. Harvard managed to get away in the last seconds, however, and the period ended

Coach Craig and the entire soccer squad have good reason to be proud of this season's efforts.
