Hilton Bond

The bond, which was issued in 1922 for the construction of the new mechanical engineering building, is due to mature on March 1, 1931. It is currently outstanding and is convertible into one share of common stock of the corporation. The bondholders have the option to convert their bonds into stock at any time after the maturity date. The conversion rate is determined by the market price of the corporation's common stock at the time of conversion.

So Students of America, if you will stop for a moment and think what the word "patriotism" might mean to us, you will see that the real meaning of patriotism is not to be found in the mere waving of the flag or reciting of the pledge, but in the performance of the duties that are assigned to us as Americans.

There are other duties that we have as Americans. One of these duties is to support our government and its policies. If we are not willing to do this, then we are not true patriots. Another duty is to work for the betterment of our country. This means working for fair wages, for good working conditions, and for an end to child labor.

Finally, there is the duty of being a good citizen. This means obeying the laws of our country, paying our taxes, and being law-abiding citizens.

It is the duty of every American to do his part in making America a better country. And it is the duty of every American to support the government in its efforts to do this.

Let us all work together to make America a better country. Let us all be true patriots.
