it leaves the Institute, and represent it as alumni, yet no more than a quarter of the class considered the issue to be of enough importance to give it their attention. You have assigned to these positions the honor that they should carry with them, and have reduced your election to a farce. It is an insult to the men and women who were elected to fill these positions; an insult to the men who thought a buttress was a buttress, to the faculty who thought a demurrer was a demurrer, to the Senate who thought a modification was a modification, to the Tech who thought a 'platform' was a 'platform.'

But surely, the students of M.I.T. are supposed to respect, and who were to choose the head of the University, the Head of the Institute, the President of the Club, and the head of the Freshmen class? These positions were assigned to the Senior Class, and they have reduced your election to a farce. It is an insult to the men and women who were elected to fill these positions; an insult to the men who thought a buttress was a buttress, to the faculty who thought a demurrer was a demurrer, to the Senate who thought a modification was a modification, to the Tech who thought a 'platform' was a 'platform.'
