Prof. Tucker Talks On Job Prospects

Guest speaker at the Combined Professional Societies' meeting yesterday was Professor C. E. Tucker, who spoke on the employment problems of the engineering profession. The meeting, which was open to the general public, was held in Room 106 at 5:30 P.M.

Professor Tucker explained the function of the placement bureaus, and the way in which they operate to aid the student. Students are responsible for the first step, that of filling out a questionnaire, before the bureau can be of assistance.

Companies in need of men inform the bureaus of their needs, and the bureau arranges a meeting between company representative and student.

Most in demand at present are graduates of chemical engineering, with power option of electrical engineering also much in demand.

Graduates with bachelor degrees can expect a starting pay of from $150 to $200 monthly, Professor Tucker reports, with masters degrees bring about $20 more. Graduates with a Ph. D. can expect a starting pay of around $300.
