The third recommendation of the Study Committee, that intercollegiate athletics be transferred from the Beaver Key to the A. A., was passed unanimously after some discussion. The reason given was that such a parallel cannot be drawn, since the purposes are not the same, and also because sports are primarily physical exercises while other activities are more mental. This decision was made unanimous, and Mr. Eames, Jr., '49, after trying hard for a long time to gain the key's support, declared that sports would be overemphasized at the expense of other activities.

The second recommendation, when the problem of providing adequate facilities and space to accommodate the freshmen was brought up, Kenneth A. Marshall, '49, president of the organization, that more efficient utilization of time with more hours for planning would enable Technology to present a compulsory sports program with existing facilities necessary. One attempt to bring the proposal to a vote failed to be approved at 6:45 p.m., passed, and one compulsory sports recommendation was defeated, which may be a remnant though not nearly unanimous.

At this point, the report was accepted with little discussion and all speeches no action on its provision was taken.

The conference, which was held on the campuses of the University of a National Student Organization, whose objectives would be: to promote student friendship and exchange on an international scale, to secure equal rights for all people and equal possibilities for secondary and higher education regardless of sex, race, or religion, to encourage student organization in the solution of student problems, and to work for establishment of democratic student government; and to deal with all problems in a national and international scale that can be handled by students in individual colleges or universities acting independently.

The National Student Organization is composed of the 38 student organizations represented at the National Conferences. Thirteen such organizations as the YMCA, National Catholic Youth Council, and the American Youth for Democracy, with every college and university in the country represented.

It was stated that the organization would be non-political with the exception that it would be unalterably opposed to any abridgment of democracy. The need for such an organization was suggested by the United States delegates at the Prague conference last summer, where the manager would be glad to see anyone interested at the studio.

Crowded Housing Newss Class

This crowded living conditions for Technology students will prevail for some time to come is indicated by the location of this month's entering class and the very limited fraternity rushing this fall. Nearly two-thirds of the group, which includes roughly 260 freshmen and 160 returning students and transfers, are living in the converted research lab in Building 22. This building is now full, according to Mr. Henry L. New, manager of the dormitories, who added that the regular dorms have been filled to capacity since last fall. About 100 members of the class live close enough to school to commute from their homes, while about 10 are living in boarding houses. So far only about a dozen freshmen have been pledged by fraternities, which obviously is far below the normal proportion. Theta Chi, Sigma Chi, Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta have two each at the present time.
