Public Rel. Comm. Holds Competition

6 Members To Be Picked From Thirty Applicants

Approximately 30 students have entered a competition for membership in the newly-formed Public Relations Commission. Among those, six members, including at least one junior and one sophomore, will be chosen. A meeting for the new group, with Dean S. Brook, '46, outlined the aims and history of the Committee. The chief purpose of the Committee is to publicize student activities outside of the Institute.

The competition consists of three parts: a questionnaire, a theme, and a personal interview. The questionnaires serve the purpose of presenting the background of the applicant, and the personal interviews will be handled by the five student members. The themes are to illustrate the candidate's ability to write a good news release or publicity program. Names of successful candidates will be announced in two weeks.

student body. The Institute Committee on Student Activities has attempted to regulate the organized student activities. Thus, it is assumed that the student activities should have more representation from the student body. But even in these cases, special committees are elected to carry through a class is a class as such is relatively inactive and ineffective one. The student body. The Institute Committee will be chosen as in these cases, special committees are elected to carry through an active one.

In conclusion, let me say that this is but one man's opinion, and that there are undoubtedly aspects of the problem that have not been discussed, and that will do well to be brought up. This column and the Institute Committee itself will, I am sure, welcome other opinions on this subject.

Very truly yours,
