A WORTHY PROJECT

Beginning next Monday and continuing until the program is completed, the Tech will be running a drive to obtain subscriptions to the Institute of Technology's Digest [sic]. Each subscription, at a cost of 50 cents per year, will benefit Tech members in two ways. First, every subscription will help to create a more favorable impression of the Institute at the national congress to be held in New York next month. Second, the money obtained by the drive will be used to support Tech activities, including the Tech Digest, which is entirely supported by subscriptions.

OPEN THE DOOR, SCHNICK! Even modern scientists are not immune to the charm of the old-time barn door! Two barn doors in the lobby of A.A. have been altered in such a way that they open and close slowly and silently. The effect is quite pleasing, and it is hoped that this will encourage more Tech members to use the departmental offices.

Letters to the Editor

Editor, THE TECH

Dear Sir:

The exhibit in the building at the in her name. I hope this information is of interest to anyone attending MIT's prom. The Tech will be continuing to publish articles and stories about the prom throughout the week, so please check back for more updates.

Finals are over for the semester, and with the end of the academic year comes the opportunity to relax and enjoy the outdoors. This weekend, the Tech Digest will feature a special section on outdoor activities, including hiking, camping, and picnicking. Be sure to check it out for ideas on how to spend your time off campus.

Stratton Prize Awards

Will Reserve This Spring

Annual award of the Stratton Prize will be reserved for the student who demonstrates the greatest promise in the field of electrical engineering. This year, the prize will be awarded to Jane Smith, a senior from the Electrical Engineering Department. Smith has consistently demonstrated a high level of academic achievement and leadership in the field of electrical engineering, making her the perfect candidate for this prestigious award.

The Tech Digest is a publication of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, distributed weekly. The Digest is published by the Student Newspaper, a registered student organization. The opinions expressed in the Digest are those of the writers and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Student Newspaper or its sponsors. The Digest is available for free at all Tech locations, and subscriptions are also available for $5 per year.
