GOOD-BYE

This is probably the first time in history when we are tempted to dismiss our graduating seniors with a fond, "we're glad to see you go." The graduating seniors; student body presidents Scan point with pride at having experienced a dearth of trained personnel during the war, while at the same time industry is "placing an accent on youth as it hurriedly girds for the stiff business competition of the future." And when all's said and done, Manly an editor has the same opportunities to get out into industry rather than to stay on for postgraduate work, masters and doctors should be at a premium for some time to come.

The overall employment picture, therefore, looks very bright and we're happy that our seniors are offered this fine opportunity to get a start in this brave new world.

Only an editor is supposed to know everything that happens as it is taken for granted that he already knows it, and nobody ever tells him anything; only an editor is supposed to have to grope blindly along, trying to put his next term. We've gotta go now. See you later.

GOOD-BYE

By EV DULIT

"Who is the new president?"

"Well, this isn't going to turn the spotlight upon The Tech's retiring editor and publisher, Mr. Judson, who has served with distinction for many years.

This time again to turn the spotlight upon The Tech's retiring Editor and Publisher, Mr. Judson, who has served with distinction for many years.

ARKOLD F. JEDDON Assistant to the Publisher, and then junior. He was only editor slightly as a junior, but he also worked for the T.C.A. half page.

As was common during the last few years, after young Judson did not come the senior year, but rather a year of off-years which coincide with the senior year, but which is spent in writing off the last of the senior's senior novels in the Ceresse. So he decided to give it a try.

He hopes to go on to Graduate School in some field like Chemical Engineering, where he will have the chance to work with R.B. sheep skin in above.

What he reads in the Wall Street Journal now is a little more serious. At least he doesn't want to be a journalist.

In the Spotlight

JUD W. JUDSON Assistant to the Publisher, and then junior. He was only editor slightly as a junior, but he also worked for the T.C.A. half page.

As was common during the last few years, after young Judson did not come the senior year, but rather a year of off-years which coincide with the senior year, but which is spent in writing off the last of the senior's senior novels in the Ceresse. So he decided to give it a try.

He hopes to go on to Graduate School in some field like Chemical Engineering, where he will have the chance to work with R.B. sheep skin in above.

What he reads in the Wall Street Journal now is a little more serious. At least he doesn't want to be a journalist.

In the Spotlight

JUD W. JUDSON Assistant to the Publisher, and then junior. He was only editor slightly as a junior, but he also worked for the T.C.A. half page.

As was common during the last few years, after young Judson did not come the senior year, but rather a year of off-years which coincide with the senior year, but which is spent in writing off the last of the senior's senior novels in the Ceresse. So he decided to give it a try.

He hopes to go on to Graduate School in some field like Chemical Engineering, where he will have the chance to work with R.B. sheep skin in above.

What he reads in the Wall Street Journal now is a little more serious. At least he doesn't want to be a journalist.