Usborne Seeks World Charter Draft by 1950

British M.P. Thinks Strong Central Body Needed to Avoid War

British Parliament member Henry Usborne spoke Monday in 10-250 under the sponsorship of the Lectures Series Committee on the subject of world government.

Opening with a reasoned explanation of the urgent need for some kind of central and powerful world union, Mr. Usborne went on to propose a possible plan to achieve this end. According to the hopes of the committee he represents, there will be held in the fall of 1950 a People's World Constitutional Assembly to draft a charter.

Propose a Plan

At present the predominant feeling in Europe, the speaker claimed, is that war is inevitable in the future. The prospects of conflict are made more likely by the fact that the United Nations did not possess some of their sovereign power, nations must be willing to give up.

Mr. Usborne pointed out that, if the United Nations were to achieve its aims, they would have to surrender a great deal of autonomy to a central governing body. He argued that this was necessary corollary, an effective enforcement agency. To this end. According to the speaker's hopes, the British Parliament member Henry Usborne went on to propose a possible plan to achieve the

Flag Ceremony

Another such incident was the flag lowering ceremony last week in front of Building 3, when a group of freshmen decided to ring down the tattered Sophomore symbol, and to put the flag of '91 (made from three freshmien ties sewn on a Sophomore sheet) in its place. This was done successfully after a struggle with the Sophs, and then the maids were cut to prevent its removal. The triumphant freshmen went away very much elated to know that their banner was flying over the Institute, but a few Sophs remained with two balloons and a few fishhooks in order to bring down the flag.

Water Fights

Water fights (Continued from Page 2) again. A battle raged, during which huge quantities of water were sprayed by the fire extinguishers used by both sides. Everyone was happy afterwards except for a few occupants of the lower floors who weere told to the fact that water seeks its lowest level.

Flag Ceremony

Another such incident was the flag lowering ceremony last week in front of Building 3, when a group of freshmen decided to ring down the tattered Sophomore symbol, and to put the flag of '91 (made from three freshmen ties sewn on a Sophomore sheet) in its place. This was done successfully after a struggle with the Sophs, and then the maids were cut to prevent its removal. The triumphant freshmen went away very much elated to know that their banner was flying over the Institute, but a few Sophs remained with two balloons and a few fishhooks in order to bring down the flag.

Football

(Continued Page 4) squad of the class of '91 have had two scrimmages: with Wentworth Institute and Boston Latin High School.

Coaches Jim Phillips of the freshmen and Dennis Allegretti of the Sophomores and their assistants coaches have all worked very hard to make this one of the best Field Day football games that has been played.