THE BEAVER BARKS

By HERBERT BENIGNOT

At the last meeting of the Athletic Association the question of establishing a major-sports system at the Institute arose in connection with the proposed revision of our obviously inadequate athletic and recreational system.

Coach Jim McMillen (crew), in addressing the sports committee, pointed out the necessity for a definite solution. In the past the crew coach had been able to devote much of his time to the development of the sport which this columnist thinks best satisfies this criteria: the crew coach did not feel that it was possible to establish one major sport, under the present conditions, which could be properly classified as a major sport for all practical purposes. At least some minimum sacrifice of the interest in other important sports would have to be made. However, the opportunity to control the development of the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant.

Chairman James M. Schodt, who has been the principal force in the organization of the sports committee, stated that he was prepared to proceed with the establishment of a major sport, but that he could not anticipate that it would be a success until the development of the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant.

The first meeting of the sports committee was held on Monday afternoon, with the following members present:

Chairman James M. Schodt
Vice-Chairman Joseph J. Doolan
Secretary Benjamin M. Snyder
Treasurer Walter B. Wilson

The committee was unanimous in their decision to pursue the development of the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant.

Coach McMillen stated that he was prepared to proceed with the development of the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, but that he could not anticipate that it would be a success until the development of the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant.

The committee agreed to proceed with the development of the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, but that they could not anticipate that it would be a success until the development of the sport which this columnist believes to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant, seemed to be the most significant.