Possibility Of Saturday Class Elimination Investigated By Prof. Tucker's Committee

Scientist, Educators Declare U.M.T. Bad For College Students

By Ralph C. Compton

Director of Research in the Institute, was chairman of President Truman's Commission of Universal Military Training, and so was Secretary of the Department of Defense, according to the Department of the Institute, said "With the effect of the National Education Act upon us, we have a unique opportunity to find a solution to the problem of access to a college education for all adults who want to enter it."

The project, which is to be called "Universal Military Training," is the first attempt to make it possible for high school students to enter college after two years of training. The plan is to combine the training of the army and the navy, and to provide for a uniform system of education for all young men and women.

The first two years of training would be given in the army, and the third year in the navy. After the third year of training, the students would be eligible to enter the university. The program would be conducted by the military itself, and would be supervised by the United States government.

The plan is to be put into effect immediately, and it is hoped that it will be completed within five years. The program will be financed by the federal government, and the cost of education will be paid by the government.

The pilot program will be conducted in a few select high schools, and it is expected that the success of the program will be judged by the results of this pilot project. It is hoped that the program will be expanded to cover all high schools in the country, and that it will be made available to all young men and women who wish to enter college.

The plan is to be put into effect immediately, and it is hoped that it will be completed within five years. The program will be financed by the federal government, and the cost of education will be paid by the government.

The pilot program will be conducted in a few select high schools, and it is expected that the success of the program will be judged by the results of this pilot project. It is hoped that the program will be expanded to cover all high schools in the country, and that it will be made available to all young men and women who wish to enter college.