Outing Club Holds Two Day Carnival

Blue Hills Reservation Scene of Chase

Over a hundred people participated in the second Outing Club Association’s Winter Carnival held last Saturday and Sunday. Both days were marked by a variety of outdoor activities, including a “Fox-and-Hounds” race in the Blue Hills, which was won by a group from Radcliffe.

Several amusing incidents occurred throughout the weekend. For example, a group of Tech Dames dropped bits of paper as they went through the woods, leaving a trail which the rest of the gang followed. A square dance held at Memorial Hall, which the rest of the gang followed, was a “Fox-and-Hounds” race.

On Sunday the group started early for “up country” to spend the whole day skiing. They returned late in the evening.

Under the chairmanship of the late Francis Leonard Hart, Jr., a man with an extensive knowledge of American history, the Hart Museum’s early development.

One of the first large gifts was the collection of the late Captain Arthur Clark, including some modern American paintings. Originally housed in the second floor of the building, the museum was reduced to present size during the war to make room for the DIC account.

Friday Work

Of future work to be done under the Carnegie Library research grant, Dr. Vernon D. Tole, director of libraries, made this statement: Immediate prospects involve the investigation of new concepts in public library and utilization of techniques and scholarly materials, operational analyses in the field of documentation, investigation of concepts of visual education, exploration of instrumentation particularly adapted to the field, and the compilation and review of a series of reports.

The device breaks up sound into visible patterns, making study of the phonetics of languages a simpler task. It will also be used to analyze speech patterns, and it is expected to prove of great use in correcting speech impediments. Sound recording devices are also being studied in an attempt to more fully exploit man’s sense of hearing in the learning process.

The issue at question is an up to the minute one that has received wide attention in the nation’s press last week. This is what we mean in our first editorial, and we still think it’s a good idea. — Editor.

TO CHANGE THE SUBJECT—

Dear Sir:

As a Technology Dame, I should like to protest about the headline for your story on our Spring Dance. It’s not a “Women will pay” format — and we are not exactly “women about Tech.”

If your reporter had troubled to check, he would also have discovered that the Technology Dames are students’ wives, not faculty wives, and that our dance is Friday, March 25, not Saturday. It is open to all Tech Dames and their guests.

Admittedly, some of us are working our husband’s way through school, but please, they do pay our way to dances! We’d like to think of this dance as a “husband will pay” formal.
