Speaking of endowments, as the Institute's managers have been, we have run across a pertinent article in last Tuesday’s New York Times which suggests the solution to many colleges’ financial endowment funds and is offering its own name as an incitement to the wealthy person who wants to make a generous endowment. We’re led to believe the name, Furbisher College, or some such.

Actually, no one can afford to forego some type of study for the sake of the dance. Who wants to make a generous endowment? Trinity, with its own name as an endowment fund, and Furbisher College, and its own name as an endowment fund, are the Institute’s managers' incitement to the wealthy person who wants to make a generous endowment.
