The TUMULT AND THE SHOUTING DIES

The Dormitory Committee's special subcommittee investigating Dormitory admission policy has submitted its final report. The document is published elsewhere in this issue of The Tech.

Although the inquiry was done very methodically and thoroughly, a list was made of all the freshmen and Sopho- mores living in the dormitories and each individual was checked against the records of the committee before it was prepared to announce its findings. Only a relatively small number seemed to be in the dormitories illicitly, but it was apparent that quite a few had gotten in by methods other than those indicated in the catalog, the housing bulletins, or the information given to barracks residents. There was no indication that any priority list had been maintained for transfer from Building 22.

As far as the management of the Dormitories is concerned, the committee found no one who was remiss in his duty. It was evident, however, that the actual policy and the published policy were not in agreement, and that the Dormitory Board held itself in a position to be responsible for the transfers, but not for the admitted deviations from the state of agreement. This matter seems to us to be very clearly the responsibility of the Dormitory Board. There need have been no difficulties had a realistic and workable program been defined in the first place. We hope that in the future the Dormitory Board will avoid such blunders.

Rights of Proxys

One incident that marred the proceedings of the meeting at which this report was submitted was the exclusion from the first reading of the report of the Dormitory Committee members who were present by proxy. The motion under the rule of order was defeated, but the committee was left to understand that the report of the group be submitted in a closed meeting, that the report of the group be submitted in a closed meeting, that the report be issued to the members present by proxy. The motion passed by the Committee, however, was to the effect that in the future the Dormitory Board will avoid such blunders.

The motion by the committee, however, was to the effect that "all non-members, including proxys," be asked to leave the room. Proxy representatives are legal mem- bers of the Committee to the extent specified in the priority list, and it seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting. If secrecy is desired, it should be stated to all members present. It seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting.

The motion by the committee, however, was to the effect that "all non-members, including proxys," be asked to leave the room. Proxy representatives are legal mem- bers of the Committee to the extent specified in the priority list, and it seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting. If secrecy is desired, it should be stated to all members present. It seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting.

The motion by the committee, however, was to the effect that "all non-members, including proxys," be asked to leave the room. Proxy representatives are legal mem- bers of the Committee to the extent specified in the priority list, and it seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting. If secrecy is desired, it should be stated to all members present. It seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting. If secrecy is desired, it should be stated to all members present. It seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting.

The motion by the committee, however, was to the effect that "all non-members, including proxys," be asked to leave the room. Proxy representatives are legal mem- bers of the Committee to the extent specified in the priority list, and it seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting. If secrecy is desired, it should be stated to all members present. It seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting.

The motion by the committee, however, was to the effect that "all non-members, including proxys," be asked to leave the room. Proxy representatives are legal mem- bers of the Committee to the extent specified in the priority list, and it seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting. If secrecy is desired, it should be stated to all members present. It seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting.

The motion by the committee, however, was to the effect that "all non-members, including proxys," be asked to leave the room. Proxy representatives are legal mem- bers of the Committee to the extent specified in the priority list, and it seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting. If secrecy is desired, it should be stated to all members present. It seems rather high-handed to expel them from any meeting.