CONVOCATION: A REVIEW

The Mid-Century Convocation held this past week was an important event in the history of the institution. Its purpose was to bring together the alumni and students to discuss the future of higher education and to consider the role of academia in society.

Dean Burchard said in the opening address of the Convocation that the panelists were to be considered as witnesses to the many details of the Convocation. The people want to be given optimistic tidings, so, regardless of the many details, the Convocation was superbly handled. For our general impression of the whole Convocation were the two on education and the two on underdeveloped areas.

The coverage of the Student-Forum in The Tech of March 11 was generally complete, but your editorial leaves a very unfortunate impression on the minds of those who were not there. You cite the question posed by a member of the audience, why more department heads were not represented. You may remember we started to call for a show of hands of department heads before this indirected. In fact, I personally noted exactly fifteen department heads in the meeting. Is that a mediate representation? Did anyone note exactly fifteen department heads in the meeting? Is "that a mediate representation?"

Dean of Humanities

John B. Burchard

Letters to the Editor

Dear Sir,

The coverage of the Student-Forum in The Tech of March 11 was generally complete, but your editorial leaves a very unfortunate impression on the minds of those who were not there. You cite the question posed by a member of the audience, why more department heads were not represented. You may remember we started to call for a show of hands of department heads before this indirected. In fact, I personally noted exactly fifteen department heads in the meeting. Is that a mediate representation?

John B. Burchard

Dean of Humanities

Fraternity Findings

By John Thomas

and Tom Kennedy

Now that the Convocation is over, the column bowers toward the BAA house for the Institute and笼罩 it into the bunch given for the Convocation speakers.

Several other houses took advantage of the Convocation to invite their alumni for luncheon. The one I know of personally was Beta Theta Phi, Chi Psi, Phi Beta Kappa, and Sigma Chi.

This coming Saturday faculty barges with parties. First of all, the Theta Xi's are holding a dance in the North Woods for the Paul Bunyan Party.

Open Daily Till 9 P.M.

Favorite spot for radio, newspaper, theatre, sports, and Tech crowd.

"The only alley off Avery Street" Directly behind the Astor Theatre

Friday, April 8, 1949

Tweed's.... $3.00

Shapes & Double-Bounded

Dress Suits...$4.58

with White Ties

To Rent

Harwood Charge for As Assemblies

CROMSTON & CARE CO.

RETAIL CLOTHING

72 Summer St., Boston

HA 4-3799

BELL TELEPHONE SYSTEM

Brett. Come to this one in a place:

shirt and canvas boots, but if your girl's sake, take the boots o before dancing. Incidentally, she will be both beer and soft drink.

And finally, the Sigma Alpha Xi's are running a campaign for the "Gammonite." Social Chairmen George White has won Bob No.

(Continued on Page 6)