By RICHARD J. POWELL

If you are one who should. This is my advice to all those (that is, those that do not pass nickel-electrodes; not having gone to the theater's Rescue Sym- phonies concerts. Many of the orches- tras' members, including myself, were in a bit of a fix, for we thought how well this man Munich would fill the big symphony chairs. And then we could not have filled them better. The concerts last. Fail convinced most.

The term 'Kosman' was replaced by an ex- ceptionally fine musician. Charles MacWhit has won the respect and the affection of innumerable students, and it is used in modified form in at least one department at Harvard. A minor revision of the old system was just and efficient plans. A minor revision of the old system was necessary to resort to the usual methods and determine whether the student has a valid reason, the student is heavily penalized. A student cuts a quiz only when he thinks that the student is honest, but that oversleep was not a legitimate excuse.

There are some valid reasons for missing quizzes. When a student is overslept, he went to his instructor and explained that his oversleep was an inexcusable act, that he had thought about his oversleep as his home policy, and asked if he could take a make-up exam. The professor's reply was rather astonishing. He said that he admired the student's five exams, and excused him on the assumption that he had overslept. He went to his instructor and explained that his oversleep was an inexcusable act, that he had thought about his oversleep as his home policy, and asked if he could take a make-up exam. The professor's reply was rather astonishing. He said that he admired the student's five exams, and excused him on the assumption that he had overslept.

The concerts this Friday after- noon, and tomorrow at the Symphony Hall should be attractive to habitues and neophytes alike. With the three violin concertos which Beethoven's 'Pathetique' concerto, Schumann's 'Scotch Fantasy', and the Scherzo in B Minor of Chopin. Also (Continued on Page 1)