Courtmen Finish Season Glantz High With 142 Pts.

What some promise of being Technology's most successful sea-sion in recent years turned out to be distinctly average as the Beaver-men posted a record of six wins and eighteen losses, a winning average of .318. This record, however, repsented considerable improvement over the 1948-49 season when the Engineers won only three games while dropping business, for a percentage of .177. This year's squad averaged 54 points per game, as against 60.6 for the opposition.

Scoring Record Against Bowdoin

Tech's basketballers opened their season inauspiciously, but began to hit their stride halfway through the schedule with four successive wins over W.P.I., Stevens, New Hampshire, and the hapless Pine Staters, lighting the drive. The Beavers reached their peak on the bugis Bowdoinmen 63-74 to set a new scoring record. They then ran into trouble after this high point, however, losing a last-minute decision to Northeastern 47-49, and then dropping their final three games to St. Anselm's, Tufts, and Connecticut.

Loss to Trinity

In addition to the Northeastern battle, the Beavers were involved in three other light upsets during the course of the season. They dropped their fifth game to Coast Guard by a 50-45 count, then just failed to win their Boston Garden debut against Trinity in an 87-96 thriller. Then, on February 15th, Durham saw the Beavers pull out an exciting 64-61 victory over New Hampshire.

The 811 points which the Beavers scored against the opposition were fairly well distributed over the entire squad, with the top six men, Glantz, Corrie, Garthe, Roborst, Nacey, and Morrison, collecting 459 or 71% of the total. By way of comparison, the top six scorers of the 1941-42 season hit for 774 points, or 80% of the total.

Glantz High Scorer

This year's edition of Tech's basketballers had no scorer to com-pare with Jim Macdonald, class of '29, who singlehandedly kept the Beavers in many nail biter games by scoring 809 points over the 17-game schedule. Herb Glantz was high this season by leg, pacted last year's Beavers with a 36% conversion average. Most persons associated with the Beaver boosters predict a better season next year, however, basing their predictions on Ted Heuchester's proved play at guard and the platoon of Herb Glantz, Larry Garthe, Mike Nacey, Henry Roborst, and company. Dick Jankowski, Cliff Hirtzman, Betle Wilson, Mandy Manderon and Russ Kid-dar, the last three from Warren Berg's Fresh, are also expected to help out.

THE TECH

Sailors Take Fourth In Harvard Regatta

Last Sunday, opening their 1950 Spring sailing schedule, the techology skippers started off the season with a fourth place. Sailing in the Harvard Invitational Footstall Regatta, an official affair, Beavers showed Pever, in A division, and John Lawson, in division B, took a first and a third places. Winner of the regatta was the Harvard team, Harvard II, which was forced to sit out last year's competition due to lack of participation. Pre-season favorites are running true to form as the intramural volleyball season starts into its second half. Four of last season's finalists are heading their respective leagues and are safe bets to make this year's finale. In league 1 Sigma Chis, last year's winners, are undefeated and will go into the finals favored to repeat last year's triumph. Phi Delta Theta, Theta Chi, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which were in last year's final playoff are again heading their respective leagues and seem certain of making the playoffs. Phi Kappa Sigma and Phi Gamma Delta in leagues 4 and 6 by virtue of upset victories over the Delta's and Sigma Nu are leading their leagues.

The regular season will end the Thursday before vacation and play-offs will start immediately af-fter school reopens. The play-offs consist of six teams, winners of their respective leagues, engaging in a round robin tourney.

Camels for Mildness!

Yes, Camel's are SO MILD that in a coast-to-coast test of hundred of men and women who smoked Camels—

"Don't go in there, Mac. He doesn't like smokes?"

... so/.

In a round robin tourney.

Volleyball Season Halfway Through; Favorites Winning

Pre-season favorites are running true to form as the intramural volleyball season starts into its second half. Four of last season's finalists are heading their respective leagues and are safe bets to make this year's finale. In league 1 Sigma Chis, last year's winners, are undefeated and will go into the finals favorite to repeat last year's triumph. Phi Delta Theta, Theta Chi, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which were in last year's final playoff are again heading their respective leagues and seem certain of making the playoffs. Phi Kappa Sigma and Phi Gamma Delta in leagues 4 and 6 by virtue of upset victories over the Delta's and Sigma Nu are leading their leagues.

The regular season will end the Thursday before vacation and play-offs will start immediately af-fter school reopens. The play-offs consist of six teams, winners of their respective leagues, engaging in a round robin tourney.

Camels for Mildness!

Yes, Camel's are SO MILD that in a coast-to-coast test of hundred of men and women who smoked Camels—

"Don't go in there, Mac. He doesn't like smokes?"

... so/.

In a round robin tourney.