Billed as "French and funny," the drama is set in the fast-paced world of the fashion business, where the wealthy and the ambitious compete to rise to the top. The plot follows a young fashion designer who becomes an overnight sensation when her first collection is bought by a fashion mogul.

The play is directed by Marjorie Silverman, who is also the producer of the production. The cast includes leading actors from the New York City theater scene, including a young actress who has already received critical acclaim for her role in a Broadway play.

The play opens on November 3 at the Drama House Theater, and tickets are available now through the box office. Don't miss your chance to see this exciting new production!
