Students From Europe and U.S. Exchange Jobs

100 From Institute Go Abroad Next Summer; Interviews Start Mon.

The International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical experience is, for the second year, allowing American students to return to the United States for European students.

Last summer 37 American Junior and Senior terminal students, including students from Technology, worked in European companies for about eight weeks to gain industrial and cultural experience.

Main features of the program are a chance for exchange associates of E.A.T.E.R.N. to obtain jobs in technical industries for American students and students living accommodations and social events for the United States' associates, the group from Technology, does the same for European students. The participants pay their round trip fare, about three hundred dollars, and are paid stand and wages by the companies for whom they work.

If enough people show up on Sundays for the next month, the experiment will be considered a success and the new service will be made a permanent feature.
